Dear Parent:
Your child's love of reading starts here!

Every child learns to read in a different way and at his or her own speed. Some go back and forth between reading levels and read favorite books again and again. Others read through each level in order. You can help your young reader improve and become more confident by encouraging his or her own interests and abilities. From books your child reads with you to the first books he or she reads alone, there are I Can Read Books for every stage of reading:

SHARED READING

Basic language, word repetition, and whimsical illustrations, ideal for sharing with your emergent reader

BEGINNING READING

Short sentences, familiar words, and simple concepts for children eager to read on their own

READING WITH HELP

Engaging stories, longer sentences, and language play for developing readers

READING ALONE

Complex plots, challenging vocabulary, and high-interest topics for the independent reader

ADVANCED READING

Short paragraphs, chapters, and exciting themes for the perfect bridge to chapter books

I Can Read Books have introduced children to the joy of reading since 1957. Featuring award-winning authors and illustrators and a fabulous cast of beloved characters, I Can Read Books set the standard for beginning readers.

A lifetime of discovery begins with the magical words "I Can Read!"

Sammy THE SEAL

It was feeding time at the zoo.
All the animals were getting their food.

The lions ate their meat.

The elephants ate their hay.

The monkeys ate their bananas.

The bears ate their honey.

Then it was time
for the seals to be fed.
Mr. Johnson took them fish.

“Hooray for fish!” said the seals.
They jumped in the water.

Soon the basket was empty.

“That is all there is,” said Mr. Johnson.

“There is no more.”

“Thank you for the fish,” said the seals.

“They were good.”

The seals were happy.

But one little seal was not happy.

He sat by himself.

He looked sad.

“What is wrong, Sammy?”

said Mr. Johnson.

“I want to know what it is like outside the zoo,” said the little seal.

“I want to go out and look around.”

“All right, Sammy,” said Mr. Johnson.
“You have been a good seal.
You may go out and see.”

“Good-bye, Sammy,” said the other seals.
“Have a good time.”
“Good-bye,” said Sammy.

"Where are you going?" said the zebra.

"I am going out," said Sammy.

"Have fun," said the hippo.

"Come back soon," said the giraffe.

Sammy walked and walked and walked.
He did not know what to look at first.

“That seal must be from out of town,” said a man.

Sammy looked at everything.

“What street is this?” said a man.
 “I am a stranger here myself,”
 said Sammy.

“I guess it is feeding time here, too,”
 said Sammy.

"That is a lovely fur coat," said a lady.

"Where did you get it?"

"I was born with it," said Sammy.

"I wish I could find some water.

I am hot. I want to go swimming,"

said Sammy.

"We are sorry. There is no room for you in this puddle," said the birds.

"And there is no room for you here," said the goldfish.

"Keep out," said the policeman.

"You cannot swim in there."

"Ah, here is a place!" said Sammy.

"Who is in my bathtub?" said someone.

"I am sorry," said Sammy.

He left at once.

Some children were standing in line.

Sammy got in line, too.

“What are we waiting for?”

asked Sammy.

“School. What do you think?” said a boy.

“That will be fun.

I will come, too,” Sammy said.

The teacher was not looking.

Sammy sat down.

The children made words with blocks.

Sammy wished he could spell.

“All right, children.
Now we will all sing a song,”
said the teacher.

“Is it you, Joey?”
said the teacher.

“No,” said Joey.

“Is it you, Helen?”
said the teacher.

“No,” said Helen.

"Is it you, Dorothy, Robert, Fred, Joan, or Agnes?"

"No," said the children.

"Then it must be you,"
said the teacher.

"I am sorry. This school is just for boys and girls."

"Please let me stay," said Sammy.

"I will be good."

"All right. You may stay," said the teacher.

Sammy was happy.
He sat at his desk
and looked at the teacher.

He learned how to read.

He learned how to write.

"And now it is time to play,"
said the teacher.

"Who wants to play a game?"

"We do," said the children.

They threw the ball over the net.

"The ball must not hit the ground," cried Sammy's team.

"Somebody catch the ball."

Sammy caught the ball on his nose!

A boy on the other team tried to catch the ball on his nose, too. "Boys must catch with their hands," said the teacher.

Sammy tried to catch the ball with his flippers.

“Seals must catch with their noses,”
said the teacher.

Up and down went the ball,
from one side to the other.

At last the teacher blew her whistle.

“Who wins?” said the children.

“It is even,” said the teacher.

Everybody was happy.

A bell rang. School was over.

“Will you be here tomorrow?”
said the children.

“No,” said Sammy.

“School is fun,
but I belong in the zoo.

I just wanted to know what it is like outside.

Now I have to go back.”

“Good-bye, Sammy,” said the children.

“We will come to see you.”

“Good,” said Sammy.

Sammy was in a hurry to get back to the zoo.
He had so much to tell the other seals.

“May I welcome you home, Sammy,”
said Mr. Johnson.
“I am glad you are back.
You are just in time for dinner.”

“There’s no place like home,”
said Sammy.
